Shooting 101: Review Notes

Record Solid Audio

- Take another look at the “Clearing Things Up” video and review notes.
- Remember most audio problems are easy to fix during recording and nearly impossible to repair during editing.

Plan Your Shoot Carefully

- Use your outline to think through what video clips and photos you might need.
- Plan locations that help reinforce your message.

Don't Worry About How You Look On Camera

- Your message is more important than how you look.
- Focus on being natural and sincere.

Find a Helper

- Look for someone who can watch and listen for recording problems.
- Talk to them instead of the camera for a more natural/conversational feel.

Review Your Work

- Before you leave a location, or take apart your lights, always review what you've recorded and check for recording problems.
- If you're recording to tape, don't forget to return to the end of the tape after your review!
